Stork Technical Services receives international recognition from the Institute of Asset Management

Stork Technical Services has qualified for the list of Endorsed Training Providers published by the renowned Institute of Asset Management (IAM). This recognition confirms that Stork's 'Thinking & Doing' approach is industry-leading and highlights the excellent work carried out by the company's Consultancy division.

An increasing number of industrial companies are organising and structure their Asset Management offering in accordance with the PAS55 Asset Management standard (Publicly Available Specification; to be ISO 55000 Asset Management in the future). In South America it is now virtually impossible to win Asset Management contracts without being able to show proof of knowledge and expertise to this standard.

Stork Technical Services will be included in the list of Endorsed Training Providers (ETP) published by the Institute of Asset Management and this official recognition will significantly strengthen the position of Stork in the international market.

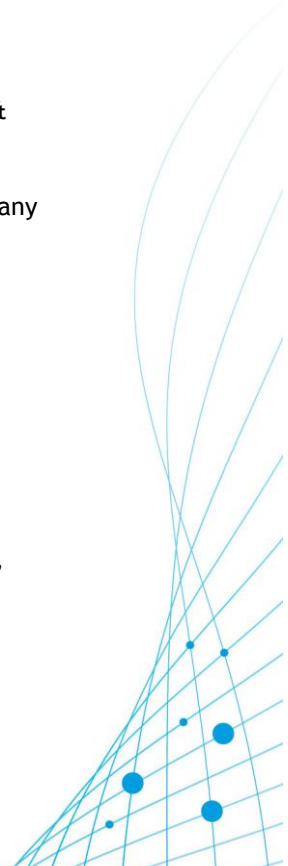

"The fact that we are now recognized as an Endorsed Training Provider by an international organization, such as IAM, demonstrates the high quality of our training activities and Asset Management Consultancy practice", says Femke de Jager, Vice President Asset Management Consultancy at Stork Technical Services. "This confirms our ability to deliver on our 'Thinking & Doing' promise."

Stork Technical Services will provide IAM certified training to its employee community at company locations across the globe including the Netherlands, Belgium, Colombia, Mexico, Peru and Ecuador.
